Season's reading: printed gifts

By VALERIE STELLA

Staff Writer

This week's selections include paperbacks, all kinds of books, and newly published classics. And this year, you can find a gift for the gardener, with a special section on the standard solutions.

Studs Terkel's new book "Working," (Holt, $8.95) offers a fascinating view of the American male. The author of "Working" has interviewed over 125 workers to create this book, which is an excellent introduction to the lives of many working men.

The "New York Times Book Review" offers a special section on books for and about women. This section features reviews of books on topics such as relationships, career, and self-help.

For the gardener, "The Book of the Garden," (Houghton Mifflin, $20) is a comprehensive guide to gardening, including information on plant care, garden design, and landscape architecture.

The "Chicago Tribune" offers a special section on books for children. This section features reviews of children's books, including picture books, chapter books, and young adult fiction.

The "New York Times" offers a special section on books for adults. This section features reviews of books in various genres, including fiction, non-fiction, and poetry.

For the shopper, the "New York Times Book Review" offers a special section on books that make great gifts. This section features reviews of books that are perfect for the holidays, including novels, memoirs, and children's books.

The "Chicago Tribune" offers a special section on books that are perfect for cozy evenings at home. This section features reviews of books that are perfect for reading in front of the fireplace, including fiction, non-fiction, and poetry.

The "New York Times" offers a special section on books that are perfect for travel. This section features reviews of books that are perfect for reading on long flights or during road trips, including travel guides and memoirs.