Music Symposium To Close
With Babbitt Compositions

Today, a concert of the 93rd annual event of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, the music symposium, will close with a performance of “A ‘skeletor’” by John Cage. The piece is a composition for a skeleton and was written in 1959. It’s a minimalist work that explores the concept of time and the idea of a cycle.

Business Building Grounds
Landscaaped For Dedication

Landscaping projects are currently underway on the grounds surrounding the new building. The building is scheduled to be held on May 10. The landscaping includes the addition of native plants, the installation of a rain garden, and the creation of a small pond. The landscaping will create a more sustainable and water-efficient environment.
