American Players Theatre brings 'Coyotes of Error' to Iowa City

By Mary Owen

I T WOULD BE EASY to read a play by William Shakespeare as if it were a book, to sound its words, and to slip away from a live performance. But at one's own pace. That's the beauty of recording, and that's the beauty of the American Players Theatre's upcoming program called "A Man, a Woman, and a Book." The concept is simple: you can hear entire Shakespearean plays, performed by APT's actors, in the comfort of your own home.

The program's name "A Man, a Woman, and a Book" refers to a famous Shakespearean play, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." In the play, a group of characters, including a man, a woman, and a book, come together in a magical forest to create a world of fantastical events.

The program will include recordings of all of Shakespeare's plays, as well as shorter readings of his sonnets and monologues. Each recording will feature different actors, allowing listeners to experience the plays in a variety of ways.

The program will be available for purchase online, and will be delivered to subscribers' homes. APT's website will include information on how to order the program and details on the actors involved.

The American Players Theatre is located in Spring Green, Wisconsin, and is a professional theatre that produces a variety of Shakespearean and classical plays throughout the year.

For more information on "A Man, a Woman, and a Book," visit the American Players Theatre's website or contact them directly.