As its title might suggest, Sine Language contains a wide variety of works featuring music of varying levels of order and complexity. Some pieces contain structured, tonal, and historically meaningful music, others contain seemingly artless, and still others contain seemingly artificial, others do not.

Luke Dahn is currently pursuing his B.M. in music theory and composition at Western Michigan University with Dr. Gebuhr, and Richard Adams as his primary instructor.

Peter Rosewalt

Peter Rosewalt is second year student.

Evan Kuchar

The Melon, a type of edible fruit, inspired Evan Kuchar's participation in the concert. The tape part is comprised of several tape loops and the music starts and stops within the loops.

Evan Kuchar is in his first year of study at the University of Iowa and his composition is directed by David Grusin and Larry Fritts.

Michael Osler

Don't Forget To Breath
This composition was actually written in '03. The film is titled Another Life: Self Defense and follows our war decisions. Don't Forget To Breath is a film about war, politics, and the time liberating silenced voices, guitars, and drum loops along with the sound of war.

Michael Osler is a junior under David Grusin. Michael studies music indepedently.

Scott A. Shoemaker

Effective

Brief Intermission is a composition that attempts to integrate the film 'Another Life: Self Defense' and the music 'Don't Forget To Breath'. It is really an attempt to integrate the film into the music. While it stays in A minor through as much of the film as possible, it is a very difficult task to achieve in one keyboard setup.

Christopher Diehl is currently in his third year of study in composition and is a student of David Grusin.

Scott A. Shoemaker

Kyala Johnson

10:54 a.m. Nigger: Object's Meditations

Christopher Diehl is currently in his third year of study in composition and is a student of David Grusin.

Stephen Swanson for voice
As its title might suggest, Sine Language is made up exclusively of sine waves. The piece traverses through varying levels of order and disorder or randomness. While some sections contain precisely “purely” tuned chords, others contain seemingly arbitrary microtonal shadings. While some musical gestures and chords line up rhythmically, others do not.

Luke Dahn is currently pursuing a doctoral degree in music composition at the University of Iowa. He received a B.M. in music theory and composition from Houston Baptist University and an M.M. in music composition from Western Michigan University. His composition teachers have included David Gompper, C. Curtis-Smith, Ann Gebuhr, and Richard Adams.

Peter Rosewall is second year undergraduate and is currently studying with Lawrence Fritts.

Evan Kuchar is in his first year of a Masters program in music composition. His study of acoustic music composition is directed by David Gompper, while his forays in the electronic medium are self-directed with input from Larry Fritts.

Don’t Forget To Breath

This composition was actually used as the soundtrack for a 16mm film of the same length produced in the fall of ‘03. The film is titled Another Adventure of the Last Satisfaction Hero (Today’s Episode: Ultimate Weapons of Self Defense) and follows our courageous champion as he directly reacts to some governments’ unwise and brutal war decisions. Don’t Forget To Breathe is the message he delivers in a simple act of graffiti vandalism while at the same time liberating silenced people and releasing their freedom of speech. The composition consists of various guitar and drum loops along with rapped vocals and turntable elements.

Michael Osler is a junior undergraduate majoring in Cinema and Comparative Literature. Aside from film, Michael studies music independently and is involved with several underground hip-hop productions including Z Effective.

Brief Intermission is a conglomeration of several ideas and techniques that were acquired over the last semester. It is really an attempt to interleave aspects of instrumental music with concepts found in electronic mediums. While it stays in A minor throughout the entire piece, other pitches and sounds contribute to the palette of colors that can be achieved in one key while harnessing the electronic advantage.

Christopher Diehl is currently an undergraduate student with majors in voice and studio art. While his main focus of study is yet to be determined, he plans on being very active in the electronic music department. He studies with Stephen Swanson for voice lessons and Lawrence Fritts for composition.
then I shall see face to face
The title of the work refers, of course, to the well known verse from 1 Corinthians which begins “Now I see as though through a looking glass darkly...” This is how a felt as I began my first foray into the world of electroacoustic music. I understood where I was going in the abstract, but the real aesthetic questions remained difficult. This music, then, seeks to reconcile many of these problems - primarily, when one is stripped of harmony, really, pitch altogether, how does one create musical coherence? Other models must come into play - in this case, the well worn film model (calm, false crisis, real crisis, denouement) - while still holding onto some aspects of music, including a “theme” built out of a reoccurring rhythm (treated with some flexibility) appearing throughout the work in a number of different guises.

Scott A. Shoemaker (b. 1977) holds a Bachelor of Music degree from Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa where he majored in composition and music theory and a Master of Music degree in Orchestral Conducting from the University of Nebraska - Lincoln. An active composer, Mr. Shoemaker is the recipient of grants, commissions and prizes from Coe College; The Lutheran Student Center of Lincoln, Nebraska; Milford Central School District (NY); St. Joseph’s Catholic School (Marion, IA); the University of Nebraska; and others. Most recently, he was recognized by the University of Nebraska with the prestigious Ida M. Vreeland Prize for outstanding creative achievement in music. His primary composition teachers have included Jerry Owen, Lawrence Fritts, Randall Snyder, and Tyler White, with additional study and master classes with Chen Yi (UMKC), Michael Daugherty (Michigan), Allesandro Cipiani (Ins. Mus. V. Bellini), and Fabio Ciardi (Conservatorium of Compobasso). He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity and Pi Kappa Lambda. His works for brass instruments are published by Cimarron Music.

10:54 a.m. Nigger: Object’s Meditations
This piece is about objectification and how black people in society are still looked upon as animals and degraded. This has been going on for centuries and developed out of the slave trade era. It is a meditational call out to those to hear, listen, and understand that things have not changed and it will, and has been, a slow process for those to change their perception of black people. It takes many years and much dialogue for healing. Let’s start the journey now, not only for ourselves but for our children and the next generation.

Kyala Johnson will be graduating this May with a B.F.A. in Intramedia. She will be developing the 10:54 a.m. Nigger into a series. Please look out for more exhibits this semester, Spring 2004.
